Environmental, Earth and Geospatial Sciences Students
Visit Bethune-Cookman University

Distance Education alumni and current graduate student Sarah Radel and current Distance Education student Marlene Perrin, were 2 of 13 students and 2 faculty members that undertook a trip to Bethune-Cookman University, Daytona Beach for Spring Break.

At Bethune-Cookman, students interacted with graduate students Prof. Hyun Jung Cho (Professor, Department of Integrated Environmental Science), and the Dean (Dr. Herbert Thompson, Dean of the College of Natural and Health Sciences, Engineering, and Mathematics and Provost (Dr. William Berry) of BCU. The students and faculty took an environmental education trip down the Halifax river to get a better understanding of the coastal environment and ecosystem of Daytona, the intercostal waterway and surrounding areas.

The students learned about numerous bird species including egrets, gulls, herons to name just a few and had up close interactions with the bottlenose dolphins that inhabit the river. As the tour traveled south, the students learned about the changing coastal topography and landscape around De Leon Inlet and that hazards it presents. Finally, students discussed the economic impact and social geography of the river and the area, discussing the amount of tourist the area brings to the region. As the tour concluded the boat traveled on the intercostal waterway of New Smyrna Beach, the students learned how the coastal terrain, ecology and social geography interconnect to make New Smyrna Beach the shark bite capital of the United States. This trip was funded by a National Science Foundation grant geared toward the recruitment and enrollment of Distance Education students in the Geosciences.

RN to BSN Program Recruitment Efforts in Full-swing

Dr. Erma Smith-King, Assistant Professor (NCCU Department of Nursing) along with Assistant Professor, Bobbie W. Brown and Senior Academic Advisor, Dominique Williams have been actively recruiting students to the University's RN to BSN program. The trio attended separate three events recently at the Duke University Expo Fair.

"Our RN to BSN program not only provides nurses with a more in-depth knowledge of the profession, students leave our program prepared to receive higher pay, more job opportunities and career advancement," says King.

The RN to BSN program is designed for registered nurses with an Associate's degree or a diploma in Nursing who wish to pursue a Baccalaureate degree in Nursing completely on-line.

NCCU Department of Kinesiology and Recreation Administration Offers Online Degree Concentration in Fitness and Wellness

The online degree concentration in fitness and wellness is designed to prepare students for careers in preventive and rehabilitative fitness and wellness, health disparities, and chronic illnesses prevention and serves as a pre-professional program of study for Kinesiology and other allied health-related fields. After completing this degree, students will possess the necessary academic and clinical skills, knowledge, and dispositions that will enable them to enter into diverse career paths in health and wellness - related and sports fields that enhance health, society, and quality of life. The students will also be prepared to proceed to graduate or professional programs in Kinesiology or allied health fields upon graduation.

NCCU professor, her father give back to alma mater with endowed scholarship

Grady knew the importance of education at an early age. Her father graduated from NCCU, her mother, Mary Day, graduated from Durham Technical Community College with a degree in library science, and her paternal grandmother, though a single mother of six, attended Watts School of Nursing in Durham and became a licensed practical nurse.
